Seattle's World Famous began in 2005 by Alan Nay and Tony Fulgham on a deal spelled out on a cocktail napkin. With over 20 years experience between them, they decided that they could successfully open a small shop whose focus would not only be on editing and creating top notch pieces of work for their clients but also building an environment where creativity and teamwork could flourish.

Starting with 4 employees, World Famous grew quickly and has since expanded to today's full time staff of 15. The staff size allows World Famous to move quickly to stay ahead of the curve, both creatively and with new technologies. It's also small enough that it can offer the personal service that clients have come to expect.

Co-Founder Alan Nay is a modern day renaissance man. As a father, experimental musician, creative director as well one of the two live action directors as at World Famous, Alan finds his passion in collaborating with smart people to create something unexpected and unique. His career as an editor and designer offers an unusual perspective in his role as a live action director. His most recognizable talent though is that of office jokester, always keeping his staff motivated and laughing.

Having recently been awarded Seattle's "Best Places to Work" by both the Puget Sound Business Journal (where World Famous won the top award for it's category) and Seattle Metropolitan Magazine, World Famous remains on the cutting edge of design as well as the ability to shoot even the most straightforward brand film.

Recent projects include Xbox, Nordstrom, Seattle International Film Festival, The Leo Museum in Salt Lake City, Woodland Park Zoo as well as movie title sequences for The Possession, Shark Night 3-D and Act of Valor.
