Background: Sheeba Jacob began her teaching career in Washington, D.C., as an upper elementary public school ELL teacher working with students who struggled with academic literacy. Later she taught language arts at Explore Charter School in Brooklyn, New York, which was created to ensure that students would develop the skills necessary to excel at the high school of their choice and beyond. Since moving to Seattle, she has worked at an education nonprofit whose mission is to make academics relevant to students. Sheeba works directly with SPS, participates in school board meetings and volunteers at Washington Middle School. She brings teaching experience in urban districts, passion for educational equity, advocacy for children, and knowledge about education trends.
