Sam Cameron began his professional career working on architectural projects for the private sector, concentrating on the interior architecture and functional aspects of buildings. As he gained experience, his responsibilities advanced to playing an instrumental role on project teams designing high-rise office buildings in downtown Seattle and Bellevue, Washington. Since joining Streeter & Associates, his focus has been on public sector projects. Sam's expertise lies in the management of large-scale projects for such diverse clients as the Port of Seattle, University of Washington, City of Seattle, King County METRO, and the Seattle School District.

Sam has current knowledge of local codes, materials, costs, and construction techniques. He is a conscientious team player with extensive management experience dealing with client groups and subconsultants. He has an excellent background as a team builder and personnel manager, and is effective in managing community relations for design projects. His recent projects have required his coordination and management of multiple subconsultants. In each project, his thorough and conscientious efforts have resulted in timely project completion.
