Alan Nay

Alan has lived and worked in every corner of the country, but he found his home in Seattle and his calling as a founding director of World Famous. With a lifelong love of music and a professional background in editing, Alan understands the big picture behind every project we tackle. His take: No matter how big or small, making a film is like playing a song—both have a certain tempo and trajectory, and when your crew locks in together, improvisation turns into innovation. Despite a sense of humor that's politely described as "irreverent," Alan has long been a champion for the Seattle's creative community and believes it is as an integral component of the city's economy.
