Nicole Jon Sievers, MSW, LCSW

Bio overview:

My passion for social justice has always been my guiding force. My solution based thinking led me to form the unique and impactful Stand For Courage anti-bullying Foundation in 2011. Along with a powerful board of Directors, I have propelled Stand For Courage to become an integral part of bullying prevention in Portland Oregon and moving toward problem solving on a National level.

I am an LCSW who has helped children, adults, families and groups for over 25 years. I am certified in Imago Therapy and as an Instructor in PAIRS and have offered NASW continuing education. I worked for many years bringing Nobel Laureates together with high school and college students and am also an active founding member and contributor to the Art of Life Institute in Seattle, WA.

My work as a therapist and executive coach supports individuals, couples and businesses. I am a published author and have been printed and cited in multiple publications. Most recently, I co-authored a book for adolescents published by The Art of Life Institute, fall 2014.

My extensive training and diverse experience has led to an increasing demand for consultation and teaching on the public stage, including frequent TV news guest appearances that have been aired locally and internationally.

Stand For Courage

Program conceptual overview:

When youth get the attention they seek by doing the right thing, we can create a self-sustaining culture of courage and inclusivity. Stand for Courage provides the recognition, community support and cultural currency to shift an entire generation from dominance and bullying to inclusivity and compassion.

When reward systems change, so does behavior. We recognize and reward positive behavior in culturally significant ways, creating a domino effect among youth and their peers. Backed by science along with local and national celebrities, Stand for Courage is a recognized cultural movement for a new generation based on hope, possibility and encouragement.
